

For immediate release
March 13 2009

REPROMED OFFERS MORE THAN IVF

In what is thought to be an Australian first, SA-based in-vitro fertilisation specialist, Repromed, is offering a series of free seminars on preparing for pregnancy.

The free seminars will cover a range of topics from fertility and diet to natural therapies, yoga and finding a life balance - a blend of natural therapies and medical technology.

Repromed Medical Director Richard Henshaw says the seminars are being held in conjunction with the Australian Centre for Natural Health and Wellness.

“More and more we are finding that people are seeking alternative health treatments,” says Dr Henshaw.

“We understand that modern medicine has to embrace these alternatives and combine these philosophies and practices with the science of IVF.”

Dr Henshaw says the five seminars will link preparing for pregnancy and coping with IVF with a range of options open to women today.

“We are starting with a presentation on optimising opportunities to achieve pregnancy before considering IVF.

“And we will be covering issues such as naturopathic fertility protocols, the role of acupuncture, massage and natural therapies to counter stress management and aid in pregnancy.

“While our staff will run some of the sessions there will also be presentations by an exercise physiologist, a massage therapist and a life coach talking about balancing life and career and the desire to have a child.”

The free seminars will be held at Repromed, 180 Fullarton Road, Dulwich, over five weeks from March 31 starting at 7pm and lasting an hour.

Further information: Dr Adrienne Pope 8333 8179